

Splish Splash Through the Past (Museums of Mississauga)

Activity Overview

This interactive display will consider the importance of water to Indigenous and Early Settler communities in Mississauga in the 18th and 19th centuries, particularly as they relate to themes of drinking, transportation, washing, and cooking. Through hands-on interaction with replicas of historical artifacts, students will gain a deeper understanding of how water shaped both the survival and development of these communities, fostering an appreciation for the vital role water has played in shaping local history and culture

*The activity will be delivered by staff from Museums of Mississauga. They will provide further instructions on the day of the event.
